

LITTLE INDIA

KAMPONG GLAM

A thriving trade and community hub for Indian migrants of the past, Little India boasts architecture that carries its rich history.

Once home to the Sultan of Singapore, Kampong Glam is a proud neighbourhood of the Malay heritage.

VISIT OTHER CULTURAL PRECINCTS

Singapore's Chinatown is known as Niu Che Shui (Chinese: 牛车水) which literally translates to "cow water". This arose from the history of Chinatown's water supply, which was principally transported by animal-driven carts in the 19th century. The Chinatown population grew when Singapore's free port was established, attracting many immigrants from China. Pockets of history remain in Chinatown, along with more modern sights. Chinatown has now become the largest conserved historic district developed over the years in Singapore, comprising the following areas: Telok Ayer, Club Street/Ann Siang Hill, Keong Saik, and Bukit Pasoh.
